Investment agency takes step to woo foreign firms

Güneş Kömürcüler - ISTANBUL

A new Invest in Istanbul office, coordinated by the Istanbul Development Agency (IST-KA) along with a series of local institutions, has recently launched a new service in a bid to alleviate bureaucratic burdens and red tape for foreign investors.

The office runs as a "one stop shop" for foreign investors, as it maintains not only consultation and business facilitation practices, but also handles all the processes of starting a business via a single office, according to ISTKA Secretary General Özgül Özkan Yavuz.

Foreign investors applying to the office are able to complete everything to-do with starting a business and making an investment in Istanbul.

"When we had done in-depth research and analysis on complaints from foreign investors, we saw that one of their biggest concerns was about a serious bureaucratic burden. Together with our partners and support-ing institutions, we then decided ease most of their bureaucratto burden and launched this ser-vice in June," Yavuz said in an interview in their new office.

The agency is coordinating the office in partnership with the Governorship of Istanbul, Istanbul Metropolitan Municipality, Istanbul Chamber of Commerce (ÎTO) and Istanbul Chamber of Industry (ISO). The next step is with ITO Di-rector Senem Erdoğan, who ac-companies foreign investors for chamber of commerce opera-tions and trade registries, espe-cially on company establishment procedures.

After completing this step, the foreign investor goes to an in-come expert from the Istanbul vant software is installed in the office, so both individual and company registrations are handled in one place.

Then come social security transactions. Inspector Mustafa Şahin performs the social securi-ty transactions for the new company and its staff. He also offers consulting on the country's labor system and investment incentives in this area.

The next person is Abdurrahman Şen from the licensing and supervision unit of the Istanbul Metropolitan Municipality. The investor can obtain the required operating license without going to city hall. Ekrem Vanlı, an architect from the municipality's zoning department, helps investors in handling factory establishment and construction processes as well as finding available invest-ment sites through the office's geographical information sys-
